

Every school receives School LAND Trust Program funding based on the school's student enrollment. The interest and dividend income from the State Treasurer's investment of the permanent State School Fund is distributed through a primarily enrollment based formula prescribed in the law. The funds flow through the school district, but districts do not withhold any funds.

The school district's business office enters expenditures at the end of each school year. The principal then explains the expenditures in the Final Report (see Program Plans). This allows policymakers, administrators, and the public to see where the trust dollars are being spent and what results are being achieved at each school.
